

Private Lessons

Private lessons are focused on the individual, where students of all ages and skill levels meet with an instructor who is an expert of their respective instrument. With individual attention and goal setting, private lessons guide you in a personalized track for your appropriate learning level. Our motivation system encourages students with worksheets, concert attendance, reports, use of flash cards and more. We offer three methods of private lessons – traditional, team and non-traditional – to meet the individualized learning needs of each student. See below for descriptions of each.

Siblings may be present in private lessons if quiet, still and observing, to ensure quality instruction, however, siblings may not be present in group classes.

Please note, tuition is based on a monthly rate to include a variety of amenities with the studio on top of private lessons, such as student recitals, performance opportunities, makeup classes, and much more. Because of this, there is no “per lesson rate” offered for the Traditional or Team Methods.

Private Lesson Options

Traditional Method

Experience one-on-one instruction with our traditional method of private lessons for a variety of instruments. Traditional private lessons meet once a week in an atmosphere that promotes individualized attention.

Team Method

Our team method pairs together parents and children, friends, family members, or any two people that would like to learn a new instrument of choice or enhance already-existing skills. Enjoy a one-on-one lesson experience, while learning how to play an instrument together.

Non-Traditional Method

If you have ever struggled with scheduling lessons around your work or life schedule, or if you only need a few lessons for an audition or special performance, we make it possible for you to receive the instruction you need. This non-traditional approach is not recommended for developing musicians acquiring skills to refine their instrument. However, we recognize individual circumstances warrant a different avenue of receiving instruction. Lessons are by appointment and are scheduled based on availability.

Payment must be received prior to scheduling your lesson. Further, because of the variability of these classes, there are no refunds. Please provide 24-hour notice of any cancellation of non-traditional private lessons by contacting the Harris office.
